Because We Said We Would

A powerful new play about friendship, memories, and music
Touring across the UK in 2025/26

From award-winning Scottish Fox and Hound Theatre Company comes Because We Said We Would - a heartfelt and humorous two-hander tracing a lifelong friendship through changing times, missed chances, and the music that gets us through. The show is set in a whiteboard world where the scenes and additional characters are drawn throughout.

The story begins in 1976, when seven-year-olds Jeanie and Tam meet in a barn and make a promise: every five years, same time, same place. What follows is a moving and imaginative journey, blending comedy, realism, and stylised theatricality.

This 80-minute production features live drawing, a nostalgic soundtrack and compelling performances by Helen Fox and Codge Crawford. Directed by Ellie Jay Stevens, the play invites audiences to reflect on what it means to truly show up for someone and what happens when life makes that promise harder to keep.

Writer Helen Fox states "Because We Said We Would sensitively explores the complexities of working-class identity, gender expectations, and the long shadow of trauma".

Age guidance: 14+ Trigger warning: Contains strong language and reference to sexual assault and suicide (unseen).
The team will be in the bar afterwards for anyone who wants to discuss the show.
